

I have just handed each of you in the Class of 2010 a document: a diploma from Pomona College. In a literal sense, this document certifies that you have completed a four-year program of study, including everything from your ID-1 requirement to physical education to a senior exercise, and that your performance has been judged sufficient by the faculty for you to hold a Bachelor of Arts degree from Pomona College. The document you hold in your hands will open doors to future employment and to a lifetime of learning.
